

A French 18K Gold & Silver Heart Brooch | Citrine & Rose-Cut Diamonds

Height: approximately 17 mm

Total weight: 4.1 grams

Materials: 18-karat gold (750), silver, citrine cabochon, rose-cut diamonds

Period: French work, second half of the 19th c.

An enchanting example of Victorian sentimentality, this heart-shaped brooch unites French craftsmanship with the language of love.

The centerpiece features a luminous citrine cabochon in warm amber tones, its smooth dome catching and reflecting light with honeyed brilliance. The citrine is embraced by a delicate halo of rose-cut diamonds set in silver, their antique sparkle creating a romantic contrast against the gold mounting.

Crafted in 18-karat gold and silver—a characteristic technique of mid-19th century French jewelry—this piece exemplifies the era's passion for sentimental motifs. The heart shape, symbol of eternal devotion, was among the most beloved forms of Victorian jewelry, worn as tokens of affection and remembrance.

The brooch shows authentic signs of its journey through time, with minor surface wear consistent with over 150 years of cherished wear. These marks of age only enhance its romantic provenance as a jewel that has witnessed generations of stories.

A perfect addition to a vintage jewelry collection or a meaningful gift for someone special.

Condition: Minor surface wear with small losses of material, consistent with age
